You Are That! About the Author: Gangaji

Gangaji, born Toni Roberson, grew up in Mississippi. Like many of her contemporaries, she searched for fulfillment through relationships, career, motherhood, subculture experiences, political activism, and spiritual practice.

Her search ended in India in 1990, when she met Sri Poonjaji, a student of Sri Ramana Maharshi. In this meeting with her teacher, lovingly known as Papaji, the floodgates of self-recognition opened. The true fulfillment she had sought throughout her life was revealed. He gave her the name Gangaji, after the banks of the holy Ganges River where they met.

At Papaji's request, Gangaji has traveled the globe since 1990, offering thousands of spiritual seekers her teacher's simple but profound invitation: to fully recognize the diamond in our pockets, the truth of our own being that is already and always here, closer than our heartbeats, closer than our breath, but usually overlooked.

Gangaji teaches that true peace and lasting fulfillment are not only our birthright, they are the essential nature of our beings, completely and permanently whole, free, and at peace, available to all of us, now and always.
